WELCOME

Welcome friends to San Diego's 3rd annual Black Economic Summit. We hope you will find the Summit an informative, inspirational, and enjoyable experience.

It is heartwarming to know that African Americans are once more on the move toward meaningful progress. The next phase of the Civil Rights movement - economic development - has already begun. African Americans throughout the nation are beginning to think, talk, and take part in activities that speak to our advancement through intelligent economic behavior both individually and collectively.

Once again, we have the opportunity to change America as we did in the 1960s, during the Civil Rights movement. Economic development is the world's most powerful tool used to achieve respect, independence, and empowerment. We must use that tool effectively in the 1990s.

I appeal to you to join with the Black Economic Development Task Force in blazing a trail of economic progress. We need each other in order to achieve the goals that have been so eloquently articulated for such a long time. Remember, the next phase has already begun.

If you did not participate during the 1960s you missed the most incredible moments of our history - please don't miss the 1990s.

Once again, history is in the making!

Warm regards,

Hal Brown
