Appreciate The Opportunity

It was in the early seventies and Earl and I had taken our wives to dinner. After dinner we went to a night club in not the finest part of town. The club had patrons waiting to enter so Earl and I dropped our wives off at the door and proceeded around to the back of the building to park the car. Upon exiting the car a guy approached from the darkness who was larger than my "big friend". He asked, "aren't you Judge Gilliam?" With that I started looking around for a quick exit; Earl responded affirmatively. The guy said, "I appeared before you some years ago and I have been wating to tell you that the sentence you gave me was fair.

Whatever the occasion, thereafter, I was never apprehensive being with my friend.
