Gilliam To Preside In Municipal Court

County's First Negro Judge Named By Fellow Jurists To Lead In 1971

The Municipal Court judges of San Diego yesterday elected Judge Earl B. Gilliam, the first Negro to be appointed to any bench in the county, to lead them as presiding judge for 1971.

Gilliam, 39, will succeed Judge George E. Bryans, who will assume a trial department next month.

The judges held their election in the Cuyamaca Club and proclaimed Gilliam as their unanimous choice.

A native of Clovis, N.M., Gilliam grew up in the San Diego area, attending Logan and Stockton elementary schools, Memorial Junior High School and San Diego High.

During his three-years at San Diego High, he established a reputation as one of the top prep school football tackles in the area.

Gilliam graduated from San Diego State in 1953 with a bachelor of arts degree in business administration.

He then went to the University of California's Hasting's School of Law in San Francisco where he earned his law degree in 1957.

It was while he was a senior at Hastings that Gilliam married his wife, the former Barbara Crawford.

Following his graduation from law school, Gilliam joined the district attorney's staff as an investigator.

After he passed the state bar examination and was admitted to the bar, Gilliam was named a deputy district attorney. He remained with that office for 3½ years before he left to enter private practice in 1961.

Gilliam was appointed to the Municipal Court bench Dec. 30, 1963, by Gov. Edmund G. Brown, filling a post created by the Legislature.

The new presiding judge has served with numerous committees attempting to further racial harmony in the community for many years and has won numerous awards recognizing his efforts toward that goal.

He was named San Diego's "Outstanding Man of the Year" for 1965 by the Junior Chamber of Commerce.

Gilliam and his family live at 4571 Borner St.
