Councilman Leon Williams shows a Fourth District resident how neglect and lack of awareness by non-residents has permitted deterioration in Southeast San Diego.

This unguarded railroad crossing at busy 30th Street where the tracks run down the middle of Commercial Street poses a constant danger to both cars and pedestrians.

During his 33 months on the City Council, Leon has worked to make the rest of the city aware of his community's determination to overcome disadvantages. He is now seeking election to another term in office. He needs your support.
