PEACE

Dear Mom and Dad,

I thought you might like this stationery. The children at church made it. I wanted to get something had doves on it and had colored paper but it was all sold out so I'll settle for this. Thank you for sending the check, dad. It came at just the right time.

I have a few things to tell you. First, I have your watch mom, and I think I left mine there at the house if it's a gold longines. It's a very expensive and well-made watch so be careful with it if that is it.

Also, you will probably be getting letters from The State Assembly

for me.

PEACE I wrote a bunch of ^{letters} concerning a bill and knew that they couldn't send back few enough responses to really fit our mailboxes nor could they fit in Carolyn's mailbox at all.
So I knew they'd be safe with you.

If you want you don't have to forward them and you can keep them there until I make my next visit which will probably be Feb. 23 or 24th. Anyway, around Becker's birthday, so maybe we could call her while I was there.

I'm not positive, but I'll let you know. I am liking all of my classes so far and am actually enjoying bacteriology.

PEACE

It is really interesting. I never knew how interesting it actually was until now, that I have it. And nursing is very interesting. I'm all excited because we will be going to the O.R. soon. I had never thought of being a surgical nurse, but since we have had lectures on it and are being shown all the techniques it looks extremely interesting. I am really looking forward to it. Can you imagine little old Annie Moore handing the doc the scalpel and all? I think it is kind of amusing. It really is exciting, though. My P.E.

class of jogging is good. I so far have run up to two miles a day but I am hoping to do more and get ~~the~~ all built up.

My leg muscles are really tight so far.

Oh dad, do you think you could send me a National Council of Churches Index if you have an extra one (or year old or something.)

One of our divinity students has been needing something like that for reference use. He's new at it and is unsure so far of where to look.

Well, I have to study again so I'll see you soon.

Love,

Annie
