A National Survey of Business and Nonprofit Leaders: Key Findings

- Nearly all employers surveyed (93%) say that “a demonstrated capacity to think critically, communicate clearly, and solve complex problems is more important than [a candidates] undergraduate major.”
- Even more (95%) say they prioritize hiring college graduates with skills that will help them contribute to innovation in the workplace.
- About 95% of those surveyed also say it is important that those they hire demonstrate ethical judgment and integrity; intercultural skills; and the capacity for continued new learning.
- More than 75% of those surveyed say they want more emphasis on five key areas including: critical thinking, complex problem solving, written and oral communication, and applied knowledge in real-world settings.
- 80% of employers agree that, regardless of their major, every college student should acquire broad knowledge in the liberal arts and sciences.
