

CHRISTMAS MESSAGE FOR THE AZTEC

I wish for every student of the San Diego State College a restful and profitable holiday. While the idea of peace which we are commemorating is one which we shall have to think of in terms of the future, we can rejoice together in the thought that our nation is now working for peace. And, uniquely, the peace for which we strive is dominated by the principles of Him whose natal day we observe.

It is my ardent hope that all of us will find time during the respite from regular college work to reorient ourselves in a democratic world in its hour of travail and to decide upon the places in which we can best contribute our services, individually and collectively. May all of us return to college on January 5th with conflicting emotions and ideas clarified, ready to direct our full energies to achieve our re-thought goals.
